Jackfish Metis Phase 2 Communications

Every December and January, Stillwater contacted OCIP by phone and email to review the previous years workplans, to provide a Project status updated and to discuss potential exploration workplans for the upcoming field season. The draft workplan for the year was shared via email in March with a request to meet in spring (April/May). Feedback on the workplan and associated permitting was sought. In person meetings occurred, in most cases in April/May, at which point the final workplans for the year were presented and discussed with OCIP including jobs, contracts, environmental programs, permits and reclamation activities. In summer months, site tours were offered to OCIP to see the exploration activities, visit the exploration areas or to participate in sampling programs. When available OCIP participated in site tours, at least on three occasions during this time. After work programs were complete, Stillwater followed up with in person meetings in the fall (September/October) to discuss the outcomes of field work, reclamation activities and potential plans for the following year. All phone calls and in person meetings were followed up by email of digital copies of the updates
